THE BENEFITS OF ADVERTISING. WE learn that Dr. S. P. Townsend has sold out the good will of his Sarsaparilla business, including machinery and raw material on hand, for the large sum of $100,000.— This is an illustration of the advantages and benefits of advertising. The purchasers are Messis. Nostrand & Bach, both wealthy and well known individuals. They have, we understand, employed the celebrated Chemist, Dr. James R. Chilton, who will hereafter have the compounding department under his own immediate supervision. They are men of enterprise, and will, no doubt, sustain the character of this of enterprise, and will, no doubt, sustain the character of this celebrated medicine, which has the reputation of being the best preparation of Sarsaparilla made in the United States. The new proprietors, we understand, warrant their article to stand in all climates any length of time, which we have no doubt of, when manufactured by so practical a chemist as Professor Chilton, who is well known to be one of the first physical in this country.

chemists in this country. The public are hereby notified that the preparation extensively known as Dr. S. P. TOWNSEND'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILIA, is now manufactured under my direction and supervision, from the ORIGINAL RECIPE obtained from Dr. S. P. Townsend, and I certify that it is composed of ingredients purely vegetable, and without Meccury—and also that the ingredients are judiciously compounded, so as to obtain from them their greatest medicinal effects.

Legislature of North Carolina. So far the Legislature has rather been getting ready to do than actually doing. The only business as yet done, has been the re-election of WM. HILL to the office of Secretary of State; one of the most lucrative, if not the most lucrative, taking it all and all, in the State. This is quoted as an example of Democratic generosity. Too generous, we say, by half. Mr. HILL has had the office all his life, which seems to us a very strange argument in favor of retaining him in it. We have heard it argued, and argued strongly, in favor of removing men, that they had been long enough in office, but it is certainly a queer excuse for keeping them in longer .-Mr. Dickson, of this place, who received a few votes, was not in nomination. We are inclined to believe that certain members of the Legislature of our own party, in and about Raleigh, whom we might particularize, refused to go into caucus in regard to this matter, their own constant retention of office giving them a fellow feeling. Our people in this, the banner district, are duly alive to such courtery. It only now remains to refuse any assistance to the Manchester Road, and then we will know what we have to expect from this Central influence, which seems desirous of ruling the Democrats as well as the Whigs.

After the war, he was elected to the Senate, in which body he remained until 1829, when he returned to the House, of which body he was a member until his elevation to the Vice Presidency, on the ticket with Mr. VAN BUREN in 1836. In 1829, the Sunday Mail agitation being brought bofore the House, he, as chairman of the committee on post offices and post roads, presented the famous report against the suspension of the mails on Sunday, which gave him great celebrity, and established his reputation as a wise and fearless statesman. At the time of his death, Col. It is true, the abolitionists and negroes are very numerous, and apparently have things very much their own way at present. The business men, and men of property, with whom I conversed, generally took but little interest in the matter; but said that the law ought to be executed—that they wished to get rid of the negroes, and that if it came to a trial of strength, the negroes and abolitionists would be put down. This, however, will take time. I believe that Mr. Hughes will ultimately succeed in getting the negroes. My only regret is, that my own private business compelled me to return home spare. I should return with pleasure, even at the risk of gratifying certain gentlemen of Macon by rot-

The Csikos of Hungary. The Csikos is a man who from his birth, somehow r other, finds himself seated upon a foal. Instinctively the boy remains fixed upon the animal's back, and grows up in his seat as other children doin a cradle.

The boy grows by degrees to a big horse head. To earn his livelihood, he enters the service of some nobleman, or of the Government, who possess in Hungary immense herds of wild horses.

The Csikos has the difficult task of keeping a watchful eye upon these herds. He knows their strength, their habits, the spots they frequent; he knows the birthday of every foal, and when the animal, fit for training, should be taken out of the herd. He has then a hard task upon his hands, compared with which a Grand-ducal wild boar hunt is child's play: for the horse has not only to be taken alive from the for the horse has not only to be taken alive from the midst of the herd, but of course safe and sound in SAVAGE & MEARES. wind and limb. "There has been nothing turned up here of late wherewith to arouse the natives;—true, the village architect has bought a snuf-box. Parker Abbots a new pipe, the postmaster has had a new chimney to his domicil, Walker Bell has just finished the laying of ten new shingles on Jenkin's bearn—he works by the day—a foot in height has been added to the new dam, and a new window has been cut in Dea. Foot's mill, but something of more "pith and moment" is needed to stir the sluggish blood of the Quampheganers, so I'll e'en try my hand at getting up a new wonderment."

We have before us the Edinburgh Review for the quarter ending October, 1850. It contains, of course. a large number of able articles : among the rest, one on the present position of America, in which the writer seems to take something like a proper view of the American system of government, and appears to be impressed with the fact that ours is not a consolidated central government, but a confederation of independent sovereignties, or, as the reviewer terms it, a great brotherhood of British nations. The great speech of Mr. Webster on the slavery question is very highly commended. There is also a very philosophical and sensible article upon the difficulties of the many placed us under obligations we shall never forget, we feel inclined to jot down, now and then an instance of his claim to the hand of them. Republican France.

has sent us "Letters from the Backwoods, and the join the innumerable throng of servants that waited Adirondac," by Rev. J. T. HEADLEY, which is quite a readable affair Headley's style is rather pompous, thirty years old, was a smoke dried wench of some or rather, it displays a constant straining after effect, which frequently lead to the employment of figures and expressions anything else than chaste or classical, yet on the whole his language is generally picturesque, and sometimes beautiful. We quote a part of the first chapter as a specimen of the work. We think our readers will concur in our opinion, that it is really fascinating.

Its dusky form glances now and then on the eye, and where his pinion still floats him onward. The smoke of the clearing wreaths in slow and spiral columns skyward; while the whistle of the woodman, as he shoulders his axe and wends his weary way to his long but, is the only human sound that disturbs the ranquility of the scene. And now the twilight deep news or all. The fire of the distant fallow flashes up in the darkness, and the cry of the boding owl comes like a voice of warning on the ear. The man sinks before the early dreamer, and dear associations come thronging back on the staggering memory like sad angels, and the spirit reaches forth its arms after the good and the true .--At least it is so with me; and the presence of nature changes me so that I scarcely know myself. A new class of feelings and emotions is awakened within me -new hopes and new resolutions spring to birth. I think more of that unseen world towards which I am so rapidly borne, and of the mysteries of the life that surrounds me. In N. York, life is all practical and outward. Action, action, action is the constant cry, gone to sleep beside its mate, and not a restless unholy spirit is abroad! And then the morning-how different! The morning in New York is always associated in my mind with markets. Soon as the sun mounts the dusty heavens. New Yorks seems to open its mouth and rush for the markets. But here by the forest, as the unclouded sun wheels with a lordly majestic motion above the mountain, ten thousand birds seem to have awakened at once. I would you could listen a moment. It is a perfect storm of sound. From the soft warble of the robbin to the shrill scream of the woodpecker, there is every variety of note, and yet all in accord. I said nature was quiet, and every called Bill by the papers, but we wish to know his of velvet headed wheat per acre. In the spring were moving thing at leisure; but I was mistaken. These birds seem to be in a hurry, as if they had not time Bill or William by his parents, who must have been the poorest. The result was, although much was to utter all their music; and they pour it forth in respectable people of color. Also, where the youth wasted in gathering, for it shelled badly, I had by such rapid, thrilling strains, that the ear is perfectly

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW .- Charge of Judge Kane. -At the opening of the U. S. District Court of Philadelphia, on Monday, Judge Kane made an able charge to the Grand Jury, in which he recapitulated the provisions of the fugitive slave law; the power of Congress to pass it, and the necessity of enforcing it. He also charged the jury that it was their solemn duty to present any and every man who had, or may, interfere to prevent its execution, and added :

We know that this law will be enforced here, fairly and according to its terms; and that it will be vindicated, no matter what the personal character of the men who may assail it; or what their profession or position in life, or their just influence on other topics with those who are about them. This law. I repeat it, will be enforced; and if broken, it will be vindicated. The constitutional compact, which was made within these very walls, will never be repudi-

Don't HURRY.—We heard a pathetic talk of a gentleman now very poor, in consequence of being in two much of a hurry. A dying man had quarrelled with his heirs, and was determined they should not have his money. He had made a will giving all his money to this individual, which only wanted his signature. His sands were running low, and calling his friend, he bade him take the will from the drawer and bring him the inkstand. Tears blinded the fortunate donce's eyes as he hastily executed the command. He seized a small bottle from the mantle-piece, and dipping his pen, the testator wrote his name, lay back and died. The will was put back in the chest, and the old man was buried, but when they came to look for the will they found that it had no signature. Alas! the truth was plain-in his haste for the ink he had got the wrong bottle, and the will was signed with paregoric. So the heirs got

Having spoken of the origin of massure, and having, I think, clearly proven to you that it is all produced from vegetables, and that animals have no washed the soluble matter away into a neighboring pond, there to poison the horses. I have gone among heaps of dung which were steaming away at a fearful rate, and my nostrils have instantly informed me of the escape of a substance which has a very high price in the market, yet the practical man appeared to be quite unaware that he was losing one of the most valuable ingredients of manure, namely, ammonia; he did not appear to imagine that he had any means whatever of helping himself. Now I wish to noint out how pleasant it would be to the pocket to means whatever of helping himself. Now I wish to point out how pleasant it would be to the pocket to have a little more knowledge on this subject: it is the pocket after all which suffers most. You may term me theoretical, if you please; but I must say that I think there are as many crude theories among that I think there are as many crude theories among the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds, he would the priest of Apollo fallen into his folds are priest of Apollo fallen into his folds. volatile, or which become volatile in the process of fermentation, and go off into thin air, if not prevented: that there are other substances which are soluble in tion, and which, if acted upon by water, are carried away; and that there are other ingredients which are neither very volatile nor very soluble. Now, to bring chemistry to bear no further than this, the question really is, how to stop the volatile substances from going into the air, and how to prevent the soluble from being washed away. It so happens that these very substances—the volatile and the soluble-are those which it costs most money in the market to import upon the farm, whether the farmer obtains them in the form of guano or in any other form. Now it is certainly very easy to arrest one of these wasting processes, that is to say the washing of the manure; there is no difficulty in preventing the marble head. liquid manure from being washed away; and whatev er the farmer may say as to the loss being trifling, am prepared to prove that on some farms which have seen, of five or six hundred acres in extent, the loss was at least $1,000 a year. Now this, I say, can in a great degree be prevented. If the farmer, or his landlord, will not go to the expense of having the farm-yard completely covered over like a railway station, he might at least, by shoots or gutters, prevent the rain from the buildings falling on the dung; the redundant liquid and urine from the dung-heap and readily in contact with animal matter. In illustration and in proof of this, I need only refer to the thatched buildings where pigeons are kept. You al-ways find that portion of the thatch where the pigeons deposite their excrements gives way first.— While, therefore, you are to pump the urine back again, so as to allow decomposition to take place more quickly than it otherwise would do, the next question is how to prevent the escape of the volatile materials. Of these volatile matters one is called amor, what is better still, sulphuric acid. Well, then, gentlemen, we have seen that you may arrest the volatile matters, as the ammonia, by applying gypeum or sulphuric acid. I hardly like to name these things among practical men, lest I should be censured. I know that some persons have such an antipathy to chemical names as to consider them

The Grissly Bear is the most formidable and ferocious animal in California; and yet, with all his ferocity of disposition, rarely attacks a man unless surprised or molested. The follow never lies in wait for his victim. If the hunter invades his retreat or disputes his path he will fight, but otherwise contents himself with the immunity which he finds in the wilderness of his home and the savage grandeur of his nature. Examining a Teacher. A Northern paper tells the following story illustrative of the manner in which they make teachers for public schools in some parts of the country: There are often strange stories told about schools and school directors in remote rural districts. We have heard an anecdote of a young man who lately presented himself as a candidate for the office of teacher in one of the northern counties. He had no terials. Of these volatile matters one is called ammonia; and is easily arrested by means of gypsum, opposition to encounter, and feeling confident of his farming friends. I am continually in receipt of the latest own abilities, was, no doubt, from beginning, certain improvements in these articles, and will take great pleasure of success. A WORK will be published by the undersigned this Spring, an accurate account of each County in our State, in alphabetical order, the derivation of its name, date of formation, its Colonial and Revolutionary History, a biography of its distinguished citizens, an accurate list of its representation in each branch of the General Assembly, its Towns, Rivers, Population, Resources, Products and Topography.

The undersigned has for many years been collecting and condensing the material for this work. The archives of our own State have been carefully examined, and copious extracts made from its records. Rare and valuable works have been purchased from abroad, touching the early history of our State and each County, which have never seen the light. He has been kindly aided by gentlemen in different sections by copies of original documents and faithful traditional statements, highly important and interesting.

He does not aspire to the position of the Historian, but hopes from records and statistical facts to afford materials to other abler hands for this pleasing and less laborious duty. This work, it is hoped, will be useful as a book of reference to the statesman and scholar, and man of business or leisure. Occasional extracts have been published in the Standard and other papers of this State, over the signature of "Tacitus."

of "Tacitus."

The History of North Carolina is yet to be written. The remark which one of the ablest Historians of the age, (Bancroft.) has been compelled to make, that "so carelessly has the History of North Carolina been written that the name, merits and end of the first Governor is not known," is a reflection upon us. An examination of the early history of the Counties of North Carolina shows a record of the purest patriotism and indomitable courage. This record is now covered by the dust of age, and unknown by neglect. It is a debt which the present seneration owes to the nast as well a debt which the present generation owes to the past as well as the future to preserve these memorials; for it often occurs in the history of our race, that facts known to one generation are controverted by the next, and at a succeeding period are considered as doubtful legends, unworthy of historical faith. Our Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, in May 1775, has almost been an illustration of this truth.

And names that must not wither; though the earth, Forgets her empires with a just decay, The enslavers and the enslaved, their death and birth." The ensiavers and the ensiaved, their death and birth."
